Anne Janku, Ph.D., Research Manager, Missouri State Courts

Disparity in drug and other treatment courts continues to be a challenge as it relates to access, engagement, retention, service delivery and other areas. Courts struggle to address the issue of disparities, and many don't recognize they exist. The Adult Drug Court Best Practice Standards state that citizens who have "historically experienced sustained discrimination or reduced social opportunities because of their race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, sexual identity, physical or mental disability, religion, or socioeconomic status receive the same opportunities as others." This session will explore how a Drug Court can ensure equivalent access, retention, treatment, incentives and sanctions, dispositions, and provide team training on the necessary issues. During this session, attendees will learn the best practice standard on Historically Disadvantaged Groups and identify strategies to ensure equivalent treatment of all persons in treatment courts.

David A. D'Amora, MS, LPC, CFC, Senior Advisor, Council of State Governments Justice Center

Professionals working with individuals who have a mental illness and/or a substance use disorder who are also justice-involved are often confused by the seemingly competing views of treatment needs. Providers have difficulty determining what constitutes effective correctional treatment and what other treatment may be needed to help improve an individual's wellbeing in the community. This presentation will focus on the "what" of different treatment, on "who" should provide the different treatment, the role of the criminal justice system in each realm and the dosage that may be required for successful outcomes.

Breakout Sessions

Medication-Assisted Treatment – Redbird C

Kathleen West, DrPH, UCLA Department of Social Welfare

Medication-Assisted Treatment (MAT) is an evidence-based treatment that combines behavioral therapy and medications to treat substance use disorders. With the widening incidence of harmful heroin and other opiate use, it is more important than ever that treatment courts acknowledge and overcome all obstacles to the use of MAT in conjunction with psychosocial interventions for all participants assessed to need MAT. The NADCP board of directors issued a position statement in 2012 supporting the use of MAT, and the Adult Drug Court Best Practice Standards includes support for MAT as an adjunct to treatment. As of 2015, grant solicitations from SAMHSA and BJA have included language addressing the administration of MAT, along with funding availability for MAT. This session will outline the research on MAT and a brief description of the most common medications used in MAT. During this session, attendees will learn the basis for MAT use as an adjunct to treatment, identify the medications most commonly used in MAT, learn the medications currently FDA-approved for the treatment of Opioid Use Disorders, learn the key indications and contradictions for medications used to treat Opioid Use Disorders and learn how physicians decide on treatment changes and reduce the risk of recidivism.

Revisiting Phases and Incorporating Alternative Tracks – Redbird AB

Meghan Wheeler, MS, Training and Technical Assistance Consultant

There are important reasons for the framework that phases provide for a treatment court program. Perhaps most importantly, it gives the participants visible steps to measure success. Treatment courts tend to be long, rigorous programs, lasting one to two years. Giving the program structure gives the participant bite size pieces to tear off and digest. It also allows the team to measure - somewhat objectively - how well the participant is progressing through the program requirements. This session gives an overview of the necessity of distinct phases for a treatment court participant to progress through on their journey towards commencement from treatment court. This session will provide the team with an understanding of how to design phases and court requirements. During this session, attendees will learn the two types of phases, learn about the typical phase requirements based on risk and need level, and review examples of typical phase requirements as a participant progresses through the program.

Sanctions, Incentives and Therapeutic Adjustments – Normal Theater

Hon. Stephen Goss, Circuit Judge, Albany, Georgia

This session outlines the basic behavior modification principles and their applicability to incentives, sanctions and therapeutic adjustments. It identifies the importance of incentives, both formal and informal, and their application in the program. The presentation recognizes the effect of immediate consequences in modifying client behavior, and identifies the distinctions between court-imposed sanctions, incentives, and treatment responses. The session discusses the importance of formulating a strategy for the application of graduated sanctions and incentives and appropriate treatment responses, along the importance of the consistency in those responses. During this session, attendees will learn how incentives and sanctions motivate participants to comply with program requirements, identify various incentives and sanctions that can be used to respond to a client's conduct and learn that incentives and sanctions must be consistently and uniformly imposed.

Understanding the American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM) Criteria and Placement – Redbird E

Terrence Walton, MSW, Chief Operating Officer, National Association of Drug Court Professionals

To achieve the goals of increased public safety and decreased legal recidivism and crime, participants need to be engaged in a self-change, accountable treatment process. In the past, helping people change has too often depended on seeing resistance as negative, client pathology, “breaking through denial,” and strategies that have disempowered and disrespected people. Individualized treatment using the concepts and constructs of the American Society of Addiction Medicine's (ASAM) Criteria and motivational interviewing and other evidence-based practices can help engage participants in lasting change. This session will discuss how treatment providers and problem-solving courts can work together to move people beyond compliance with mandated treatment to engage the participant in responsible, accountable change. During this session, attendees will identify how to more purposefully join with participants to facilitate action/change, discuss how to use the ASAM Criteria and Evidence-Based Practices to engage hard-to-reach people as an active participant in an accountable service plan, and apply the ASAM criteria and stages of change work to increase accountability and lasting change.

3:15 p.m. Break and Exhibits – Ballroom Prefunction

Challenges of Legalizing Marijuana and Its Impact on Treatment Courts – Redbird AB

During this session, attendees will identify concerns related to marijuana, medical marijuana, and legalization; understand the options the problem-solving court judge has in regards to participants who are prescribed medical marijuana; and learn the NADCP Board position statement on marijuana, how it relates to best practice standards and their relation to the Illinois Problem-Solving Courts Standards.

Co-Occurring Disorders in Treatment Courts – Normal Theater (1.5 CLE Professional Responsibility-Mental Health and Substance Abuse Credits Applied For)

Hon. Stephen Goss, Circuit Judge, Albany, Georgia

This session outlines what the drug court team needs to know in treating the dually diagnosed client. It discusses treatment modalities, and the team's role in dealing with this special population of clients. During this session, attendees will be able to understand the potential negative outcomes associated with co-occurring disorders, learn how clients with co-occurring disorders should be treated in order to ensure their success in the program, learn what things are most important to understand when dealing with a client with co-occurring disorders, recognize the relationship between substance abuse and mental health disorders and the role of assessment, and understand barriers to service delivery and implications for court efforts to address the needs of defendants with co-occurring mental and addictive disorders.

Domestic Violence and Veterans Treatment Courts – Redbird C

Kathleen West, DrPH, UCLA Department of Social Welfare

According to a recent Veteran Administration survey of veterans treatment court programs, over 80% of veterans treatment courts accept veterans with domestic violence charges. The dynamics of domestic violence are more complicated than other criminal offenses, and the lethality risk is significantly higher than other violent crimes. Accepting domestic violence cases increases the work of court staff before, during and after a veteran's entry. Veterans treatment courts must consider: is the veteran's behavior a result of PTSD/TBI/other combat-related conditions, is the veteran a batterer, or possibly both? What treatment program or programs should the veteran attend? Will the court supervise and sanction a veteran charged with domestic violence differently than other program participants? How can the veterans treatment court enhance safety for the victim? Developing linkages and relationships with the community-based domestic violence programs can assist veterans treatment courts with most of these issues. The presenter will discuss these topics in the context of victim safety and officer accountability, and recommend promising practices in use by domestic violence courts and veterans treatment courts. During this session, attendees will learn how veteran and military-related domestic violence is both similar to, and differs from, that which occurs in the general population, identify and implement best practices that identify risk and ensure victim safety and offender accountability with veteran and military populations, and understand roles of victim advocates with victims, survivors, and the court system.

The Role of the Judge in Problem-Solving Courts and Procedural Justice – Redbird F

Hon. Janet Holmgren, Presiding Judge of Juvenile and Problem-Solving Courts 17th Judicial Circuit Court

Research shows the role of the judge in a problem-solving court is crucial and has great impact on the success of the participant. In order to be effective, the problem-solving court judge must stay abreast of current law and research on best practices in problem-solving courts, participate regularly in team staffing, interact frequently and respectfully with participants, and give due consideration to input from all team members. Research further shows that problem-solving courts that incorporate and follow the 4 key elements of procedural justice significantly impact how participants perceive the court process and also improves their compliance with court orders and treatment and reduces recidivism. During this session, attendees will learn the key elements of procedural justice and the specific responsibilities of the judge in a problem-solving court.

During this session, attendees will learn the importance of a housing first model, housing options for substance using clients, and how to quickly transition a client out of homelessness.

Assessing Risk and Need in the Criminal Justice System – Redbird E

Daniel Hunt, MA, MBA, Director of Court Services, Peoria County

Screening and assessment are part of an ongoing decision-making process that examines information on substance abuse, mental illness, trauma, criminal history, motivation for treatment, education and employment factors, and other problem areas. Information gathered during screening and assessment is used to develop a treatment plan that will be updated over time to reflect participant progress, significant life events, and changing service needs. Evidence-based tools validated for the criminal justice population should be used to achieve best results. Participants will learn the importance of using a validated risk and need assessment tool, how to successfully use a risk and need assessment tool, examples of different assessment tools, the qualities of good risk and need assessment tools, practical considerations in selecting and using risk and need assessment tools, and how to utilize the risk and need assessment to develop a service plan.
